McKINLEY'S CAMPAIGN.

The Significance of the Nomination-Hou Protection Benefits the Farmer.

Robert Ellia Thompson in Irish World.

The nomination of Major McKinley for the governorship of his native State is an event of national significanceeven of international significance, When the news of it reached England. the London Times drvoted a special arthe London Times dryoted a special ar-ticle to it, pointing out how much was at stake for British interests. It saw that his defeat would confirm English hopes of the early abandonment of protectionist policy, while his election would mean that that policy was to show itself strong enough to hold "British interests" at buy and maintain for America a thoroughly American America a thoroughly American or America a thoroughly American policy.

In nominating Major McKibley with the appliause of the protectionists all over the country, the friends of home industry in Ohio took up the challenge of last November. More than any other man in the whole country, Major McKibley is identified with that policy. His name stands upon the tariff of 1890 as distinctly and indelibly as that of Col. Hays on the tariff of 1855, or that of Mr. Morrill on the tariff of 1861. Not only was he the chief had responsible author of that tariff, but he was the most notable victim of the wholesale author of that tariff, but he was the most notable victim of the wholesale lying, which produced a temporary fright and reaction with regard to it. If protectionists had taken alarm at the defeat of so many of their friends last November, and had been disposed to get ready to back down from the legislation af last year, they certainly would not have selected Mr. McKinley for the first high office to which he could be first high office to which he could be n cminated.

Informally he was nominated to that on the very day when his defeat was ascertained. There was no complaint ond no dismay. It was like the memorable moment after the great defeat at Cannae, where 60,000 of the 270,000
Romans of military age had fallen before the sword of Hannibal. Varro and the defeated consul returned to Rome to report the disaster and accept what the sword of Hannibal. Varro and the defeated consul returned to Rome to defeated consul returned to Rome to report the disaster and accept what punishment a hostile Senate might decree. At once all party feeling was forgotten, and the Senate voted Varro the thanks of the city "because he had not lost hope for the republic." So we rose up to greet our defeated leader, to assure him that no defeat could shake our respect for himself and our confidence in the principles for which and the weapons with which he had fought. We want no better champion in this preliminary and most significant struggle than Hon. William McKinley. Onlio is normally a Protectionist State and is a community made up of very different elements. In the cast and centre there is an overflow from Pennsylvania, and especially of that early Irish immigration of which Mr. McKinley himself is a representative. North of this lies the Western Reserve, which was settled mainly from New England. The southern counties, as in Indiana and Illinois, were chiefly settled from Kentucky and Tennessee by the small Farmer class of whites. In addition to this there has been a large immigration of Irishmen and Germans in later times, the latter being especially numerous in Cincinnati. Thus the State is a better representative of the whole country than any other. North ly numerous in Cincinnati. Thus the State is a better representative of the whole country than any other. North and South and East—Yankee, Scotch-Irish, Irish and Germans meet and are amply representative. It is more truly the keystone in our modern politics than is Pennsylvania; and for decades past the centre of gravity has lain within its bounds.

in its bounds.
Industrially it represents pretty fair-Industrially it represents pretty fairly the whole country. Two-fifths and more of the people are farmers. The crop runs up into the hundreds of millions of bushels. The tariff has brought the manufacturer into close neighborhood with the farmer, and has created ample and steady markets for food and other farm products. It has utilized the natural resources of the State until the value of the manufactured articles is now greater than that tured articles is now greater than that of the farm produce. The diversification of labor has given the people freedom of choice as to their occupation. Those who have preference for the industrial arts have a chance to find work in them, instead of being shut up to farming alone. And the recent dis-covery of natural gas under the soil of the State has given a new impetus to manufactures of all kinds by reducing manufactures of all kinds by reducing the cost of power.

Altogether Ohio is a fair sample of the whole country, and its share in the reactionary "snap judgment" of 1890 makes its impending choice of a governor highly significant, especially in view of the fact that both parties have drawn the issue more distinctly on protection than on any other problem. There are those in the East, who would have liked to have had the silver question made the issue. In some sense it is so. The protectionists take their stand on the action of the last Congress, and insist that went very far—as stand on the action of the last Congress, and insist that went very far—as far as is safe—toward satisfying the demands of the friends of silver, as it provided for such a coinage of that metal as actually absorbs into our currency the whole annual output of our own silver mines. But they do not commit themselves to either desiring or supporting any farther legislation, and least of all to coining the annual output of our mines, however great that may become. That however great that may become. That folly they left to the free trade party, which, in Ohio, stands committed substantially to free silver. Its many friends in New York do not much relish friends in New York do not much relish this. They would like to see Major McKinley beaten, but they know that his defeat means a big gain for the free coinage party. If Ohio should take that ground, it would be mach more significant than would be any similar action in a State fartner west of it. It would be the vote of the biggest and most conservative of the Western States to add indefinitely to the currency in the shape of eighty-cent dollars.

Here I may say that I applaud the Democrats of Ohio for their approval of a progressive income tax—a proposal which must be still more offensive to their friends along the Atlantic seaboard. The day is not far distant when board. The day is not far distant when our revenue from the tariff, especially it its protective character is maintained, will not suffice for the needs of the National Government. When that day comes it will be a choice between (1) introducing revenue duties into the tariff; (2) taxing land or some other form of property; (3) taxing incomes progressively. The last is the only fair proposal, as it is the only one which reaches all kinds of wealth and taxes all in just proportion to their ability to in just proportion to their ability to pay, and to the amount of protection they receive from the government. A progressive income tax also will serve cade and to "fight in the open." The American workman who votes now for an enemy of our Tariff does so with his eyes open." He knows what to expect. He solicits the free competition of the depressed and underpaid labor of Europe with his own, and with the certainty that his wages will go down to something like the European level. If he have a grain sense, he knows that the reduction of tariff duties to a free trade level means sense, he knows that the reduction of tariff duties to a free trade level means the repeal of the laws forbidding the importation of labor under contract. These laws are a part of the protective legislation of the country. We cannot invite the competition of European labor, and forbid our capitalists to bring it into the country for their own use. It would be as unjust as it would be useless to insist on such a restriction. use. It would be as unjust as it would be useless to insist on such a restric-

The American farmer also knows what is ahead of him. The opposition now stands for the free importation of now stands for the free importation of Canadian farm produce, of Australian wool, of every sort of food product from whatever country can produce it cheaper than we do. Their victory means the repeal of the duty on the wool, which has given a fresh stimulus to Ohio's sheep-farming. It means the expulsion of the manufacturer from the vicinity of the farm, that the farmer may have the joy of sending all his produce over land and sea at his own expense, and of bringand sea at his own expense, and of bringing back a scanty supply of manufactured articles in exchange. It means a wholesale conversion of our population from other industries to farming—the conversion of the farmers' customers into his competitors in the food-market. It means a vast diminution in the purchasing-power of the bushels of wheat and the careass of pork, although this will be concealed under the "cheapness" of one-half of the farmers' bargains. It will mean no reduction in the cost and sea at his own expense, and of bring-of one-half of she farmers' bargains.

It will mean no reduction in the cost of living except through absolute cutting off comforts and luxuries that are now enjoyed by all or nearly all. Instead of protective duties for the benefit of American labor we shall see revenue duties on tea, coffee, spices, sugar, and the like to pay the expenses of the government. The cost of housekeeping will be no whit lower, although we shall have no duties for the benefit of the will be no whit lower, although we shall have no duties for the benefit of the American producer.

Under the McKinley tariff the cost of living has gone down. There has been at least no rise in the cost of carpets, clothing, hardware, food, and all the rest. I have asked one home-provider after another to tell me what articles they pay more "for than they did last year. In every case they tell me that nothing is dearer than it was, and that nothing is dearer than it was, and that many things are much cheaper. The difference in the cost of sugar alone is an important item in household ex-penses. Wages have held up and in penses. Wages have need up and in many cases have risen. Employment continues general in the presence of a monetary depression; for which Eng-lish investments on the strength of Free Trade expectations from the Argentine Trade expectations from the Argentine Republic are responsible. Outside the stock market there is a general hopefulness and confidence, and the popular teeling is that any change in our national policy would be too big a venture. In a word the "McKinley Prices" lie has been exploded by the evidence of facts which touch every man's pocket. The gallant major's own district was bamboozled by that lie into voting against him. His State now has the opportunity and the duty to give it its opportunity and the duty to give it its final quietus. Shall not Ohio prove herself equal to the occasion?

The stock market to-day was less active, but displayed a firm to strong tone, which, but for the influence of Union Pacific, might have been the cause of material improvement in prices. The market during the past few days has shown an unmitstakeable disposition to break away from Union Pacific. That stock to-day was still the most conspicuous figure in the market, but its transactions were on a much smaller scale than during the last few days. The market finally closed quiet and firm generally at small fractions better than last night's prices.
